Darkness. Intense cold. Jagged rocks dressed in a cloak of white. Little hope of escape. Mile upon mile the landscape stretched on. The only hope of colour lay with the moon.

Arching slowly across the sky, barely showing her face, her delicate luminosity breaks the gloom: she veils the bleak landscape in a pale cloak. What she witnesses from her distant home makes her weep ...