		-An elephant's gestation lasts about 22 months. -In squirrels, gestation lasts only about six weeks. -Before birth, mammals grow inside an organ called the uterus in the mother's belly. The uterus is a part of the body's reproductive system. A structure called a placenta usually connects the developing baby to the uterus. The placenta brings nutrients from the mother's body to the developing baby, or foetus. Work through examples on the slides. Look at gestation periods of different animals. Choose how you wish to present data as a graph in books.	What would these two Commandments look like for Christians today? Task 1 – Think about this and record your ideas in your book. Task 2 - Choose 3 examples for each commandment and record in your books. Task 3 - Split a full page in half and draw an image/symbol for each Commandment.	What are your thoughts about the clip? Would you like to time travel? What would be the advantages or disadvantages? Discuss these questions with someone in your house: What do you think the world might look like in the future? What was life like in the past? Is life better now than it was for our grandparents? Discuss pros and cons of life now compared to life say 100 or 200 years ago. Talk about changes over your lifetime and whether these were positive or negative. How might the community look like in 10, 20 or 30 years? Do you think you will stay in Holyport? Draw a table with 3 columns advantages, disadvantages and both. List your initial thoughts about the advantages and disadvantages of life now compared to the past (100ish years ago) in the table e.g. advantage - easier to travel, disadvantage – more pollution, both – social media.
